

CarInsurance.com Answers: Does an Auto Insurance Policy Cover Pets in an Accident?

While pet injury protection coverage isn't guaranteed, some companies offer it as a part of auto insurance policies

Foster City, CA – August 24, 2022 – Pet owners might be surprised to find out their auto insurance policy doesn't cover their furry friend in the case of an accident. CarInsurance.com, a one-stop online destination for car insurance information, releases a guide to help pet owners find car insurance that insures man's best friend.

As a rule, car insurance does not cover injuries to pets during an accident. However, there are two ways people can get coverage for your pet's injuries: if an auto insurance policy includes pet injury protection or by purchasing pet insurance.

Insurers that offer pet injury protection coverage as part of their auto insurance policies include:

- Chubb
- Erie Insurance
- Elephant Insurance
- The Hanover Insurance Group
- Lemonade
- Metromile
- Nationwide
- Progressive

"Asking an insurance company agent or representative is the best way to find out if this coverage is included in an auto insurance policy," says Laura Longero, executive editor for CarInsurance.com.

Longero is available to discuss the ins and outs of car insurance.
