Drivers and homeowners can prepare for Halloween by taking precautionary measures to safeguard their property before October 31. But even the most diligent home and car owners can't thwart the shenanigans and downright mayhem that sometimes ensues on Halloween. That's when insurance plays a role, and it's helpful to know how and if it applies in these circumstances.

Halloween, for instance, is the third-biggest holiday for car thefts. Fortunately, comprehensive coverage covers theft and vandalism.

"Make sure to park vehicles in the garage, if possible, lock all doors and windows, and double-check with your insurance agent to make sure your policy is up to date," says Laura Longero, executive editor for CarInsurance.com.

And on the home front, homeowners insurance provides protection against vandalism and burglary.

Leslie Kasperowicz, Insurance.com's managing editor, adds, "Sometimes, seemingly 'harmless' pranks such as toilet-papering someone's trees can cause physical damage. And more sinister acts that have occurred during Halloween, such as burglary or vandalism, would also be a claim on a homeowners insurance policy."

Longero and Kasperowicz are available to discuss how insurance can come into play after holidays like Halloween.
